- Mihai Ralea, former Rumanian Minister to Washington, has reportedly in-1. formed certain intimates that talks looking toward a relaxation of the existing international tension were begun in Sweden during January 1949 by representatives of the United States, Great Britain, and the USSR. According to Ralea, these talks were discontinued when the signing of the North Atlantic Pact became imminent, but have been resumed at the same location on the initative of the USSR.
- Ralea is said to have stated that the following proposals were given 2. consideration and were found generally acceptable by the Soviet representatives:
  - Restoration to their 1938 boundaries of Lithuania, Latvia, Estonia, Poland, and the areas of Bessarabia, Northern Bukovina and the Dobrudja.
  - Holding of "popular supervised elections" in these areas and in other Satellite countries.
  - Withdrawal of all Soviet armed forces from the Satellite countries
  - The Soviet representatives were described by Ralea as insisting on retaining the joint Soviet economic enterprises, such as Sovrompetrol, in the Satellite countries.
